The process is simple.

This guide contains an overview of the many considerations that go into buying garage doors. Whether or not you are a first-time buyer, we strongly encourage you to read this guide in its entirety. To get started quickly, follow these steps:

CLASSICA COLLECTION®

Step 1 Pick a material.

First, decide whether you want the natural beauty of wood, the durability and low maintenance of steel or the environmental friendliness of “green” wood composite. If you select steel, you will have the choice of—one, two or three layer construction for extra durability and noise reduction.

Step 2 Choose your style.

Determine which garage door design best suits your home. Remember, even if you’re replacing an existing door, today you have a variety of styles and options to match the look of your home. Use the Door Designer tool at amarr.com to help choose the right style door.

Step 3 Find a good dealer.

A qualified dealer will provide pricing as well as determine the correct door size. Make sure they are an authorized dealer, fully insured, and have a good reputation. Do not try to repair or install a garage door yourself.

You can have the perfect garage door for your house.

The good news is you do not have to design your garage door from scratch (although, that option exists). Today's garage doors offer a wide variety of customizable features, allowing you to find a garage door that expresses your individual style and compliments your home.

How do you find the perfect garage door?

- Choose a door material that works with your lifestyle and location. For low-maintenance in any climate, steel doors are the answer. For a timeless, handcrafted look that may require more frequent upkeep, the natural beauty and warmth of wood doors are the classic choice. For a “green” environmentally friendly door, the 100% recycled fiber of wood composite doors are a newer option that combines the strength and security of steel doors with the beauty and richness of wood doors, without cracking, splitting, rotting, or rusting.
- Remember, it has to fit. Typically, garage doors are offered in standard sizes. However some manufacturers offer custom-fit sizes for uniquely designed garages. If you have a newer home, more than likely Amarr makes a door to fit your garage. If you live in an older home, you may have fewer choices, but you should have little trouble finding an Amarr garage door that fits.
- Garage doors are available in a variety of designs that fit any architecture, from old world estate looks to authentic carriage house doors (doors that seem to swing open, but open and operate like traditional garage doors) to ultra-sleek modern designs.

- Your color options are limitless. Amarr offers a limited number of pre-painted steel doors. But if you want to customize the color, steel doors are ready to be painted with off-the-shelf exterior latex paint. Wood doors come in their natural finish, but are ready for staining or painting. Wood composite doors come primed to be painted or stained.

JELD-WEN® CARRIAGE HOUSE COLLECTION

- The hardware accessories that are available with your garage door most often depend on the style of door you choose. Carriage house doors feature options for decorative handles and decorative strap hinges. The clean lines of a modern or traditional garage door may not need any embellishment.

- Windows not only bring natural light into your garage, they add another layer of style and sophistication to your garage doors. There are many decorative windows options—from contemporary designs to ornamental faux wrought iron to Frank Lloyd Wright-inspired colors and patterns—creating a garage door that fits your style and compliments the design of your home.

But you need to know the value of the garage door you choose.

Certain options are simply going to cost more. But in turn, they may add more value to your home or help you save more money on your energy bill. Determine which features are most valuable to you and which ones you can live without. With all the options available, the perfect garage door can fit your home and your budget.

Which features have the biggest impact on price?

- The price of a garage door is determined by dozens of different variables like size, style and installation. This is why few garage door dealers will quote prices before a site inspection has taken place. Installed doors can cost anywhere from several hundred to several thousand dollars.
- Construction materials can vary greatly in price. Generally, stain-grade wood doors are the most expensive, and single-layer (hollow) steel doors are the least expensive.
- Architectural elements, like windows or decorative hardware, will affect price.
- Today, all Amarr garage doors come with a manufacturer guaranty or warranty to help protect your investment.

In almost all cases, if you have an existing door and track, the old track will be removed and replaced with new track along with your new garage door. A professional garage door dealer can replace your track, in addition to reconnecting your opener, replacing the molding, and hauling your old door away. Surprisingly, this does not generally have a big impact on price. Be sure to check with your dealer when they conduct a site inspection.

Let's start with something simple: Do you want a steel, wood composite or wood garage door?

Deciding on the material for your garage door is an important first step. This will help you get a better idea of price. Plus, there are so many door styles available, narrowing your search by material will make finding the right garage door much easier.

See the chart below for features and designs associated with each material.

MATERIALS	HIGHLIGHTS	DOOR STYLE EXAMPLES	COST
 STEEL	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Durable, secure, low maintenance • Carriage house, traditional, and modern styles • Customizable with paint, hardware, and windows • Single-, double-, or triple-layer construction options provide superior energy efficiency and noise reduction • Insulation provides energy efficiency 	 CLASSICA COLLECTION®  OAK SUMMIT COLLECTION  STRATFORD™ COLLECTION	$ - $$$

Choosing the material

Choosing a style: Now you're ready for some curb appeal.

To a prospective buyer, your home's appearance from the street can affect how much they are willing to offer. And with up to 40% of the façade of some new homes being the garage, a garage door with curb appeal is key to increasing resale value.*

How do you choose a garage door with curb appeal?

- After selecting steel, wood composite, or wood for your garage door, the architectural style of your home can help you narrow your search even more. If your home has a recognizable style, a garage door that compliments the architecture of your home will certainly add to the curb appeal.
- With so many different house styles, garage door varieties and accessory combinations, picking out the right look for your home might seem complicated. But it doesn't have to be. There are a few ways to make the decision easier. (See the following pages.)

Here are two ideas for figuring out what style of garage door goes with your house:

- One way is to use the Door Designer at amarr.com. Choose the house style that looks the most like your home. Pick out a few doors from the menu. Play with different window options. If you want to see more, simply go back to the door menu and click on more door designs. Once you get a short list of the doors you like, start adding different decorative accessories.

- Another way to see how different styles would look on your home is to print out pictures of the garage doors from the Amarr Web site. Cut out the pictures of the garage doors you like. Stand 30 feet or so in front of your garage. Hold each picture, one at a time, in your hand with your arm extended in front of you, so the picture you're holding fits in your view over the existing garage door opening. This is an easy trick for seeing how different garage door styles would look with your home.

- In many of today's newer communities, the entire neighborhood has a more consistent architectural style that can help you determine which garage doors to consider. You may want a style that gives your home the most individual curb appeal without breaking from an established theme.

- After you've narrowed down your choices, examine the details of each style. Construction and design differences, like the number of horizontal sections in a garage door, can have a big impact on curb appeal. Here, you can see the dramatic difference between a 3-section carriage house door and a typical 4-section door.

Beauty is more than skin deep when it comes to garage doors.

While they enhance your home’s curb appeal, garage doors can also help keep energy costs down, reduce noise level, protect your home during inclement weather, and support a more energy-efficient, sustainable lifestyle.

What else do you need to look for in a garage door?

- Steel doors come in three types of construction—single-, double-, and triple-layer. A single-layer steel door is composed of one layer of steel. Double-layer doors have one layer of steel plus a layer of vinyl-coated insulation for increased thermal protection and quieter operation. Triple-layer garage doors are the toughest, most energy-efficient, superior noise reduction steel garage doors available. These doors offer polystyrene or polyurethane insulation sandwiched between two layers of steel.

Other factors to consider

- If you live in an area that is affected by hurricanes or strong winds, it is important to choose garage doors that comply with local building codes for wind pressure and impact resistance. A professional garage door dealer or installer can help you choose the appropriate Wind Load door for your area.

How do you know if you need reinforced garage doors? Amarr has partnered with The Weather Channel® to increase public awareness of the need for preparation ahead of the storm along with the need for reinforced garage doors for high wind conditions. Check the Amarr Web site to learn more.

- As the demand for environmentally conscious products rises, garage door manufacturers have responded with wood composite construction materials. Made from 100% recycled wood fiber, wood composite garage door skins and trim boards help conserve natural resources and are certified “green.” Plus, wood composite doors combine the beauty of wood with the benefits of steel.

Time to buy a new garage door.

Now all you need is a way to buy it. Most people buy their garage door through a local professional garage door installation company.

How should you buy your garage doors?

- When you buy garage doors directly from a local dealer, you'll have more options to choose from and get more personal service.
- To find a local garage door dealer, you can visit the Amarr Garage Doors Dealer Locator. Or conduct an Internet or Yellow Pages search for a dealer in your area.
- Make sure the dealer you choose is fully insured, carries general liability insurance, and is known to have a good reputation. Do not hesitate to ask a dealer for references, inquire about him at the Better Business Bureau, search the Internet, or talk with your neighbors to learn about his reputation. Garage doors are a major purchase, and the safety of your home and family is of the utmost importance. Do your homework before committing to any dealer.
- Do not try to install a garage door yourself. Installing a garage door is an advanced do-it-yourself project and can be extremely dangerous. Installation by a trained garage door technician is highly recommended. Leave the installation and servicing (like replacing a bad spring, for example) to a qualified professional.
